

The Daily Courant.

Monday, February 10. 1707.

London, February 10.

Having by the last Mails from Holland, receiv'd a particular Relation printed at Paris, of the Ceremony observ'd at Lisle, on Occasion of the Elector of Cologne's celebrating his first Mass there on Newyear's Day last; and thinking it may be a little entertaining to the Publick, we shall give it at length, in this and the next Courant.

THE Elector of Cologne having resolv'd to enter into sacred Orders without staying till the time allow'd him by the Pope's Dispensation was expir'd, receiv'd the Order of Subdeacon with Exemplary Devotion in June last, from the Archbishop of Cambray in the Abbey of Loo near the City of Lisle, after he had qualified himself to perform the Functions of it by practising them several Months in divers Churches of that City: He was made a Deacon by the Bishop of Tournay, on the Feast of the Conception of the Virgin, in the Church of the Recollects in the same City; and having thereupon dispos'd himself, by Works of Charity and preaching frequently, to receive the Order of Priesthood, he was consecrated the Christmas-day following, by the Bishop of Tournay in the Parochial Church of St. Maurice in Lisle. At the same time his Electoral Highness resolv'd to celebrate his first Mass on Newyear's Day, in the Jesuites Church in Lisle: Whereupon he writ to his Brother the Elector of Bavaria, to invite him to be present at it, and that Prince return'd Answer, That he was desirous not only of that Satisfaction, but likewise of the Comfort to receive the Communion that Day from his Hands, and would come accordingly. The Elector of Cologne acquainted the King of France likewise, by his Envoy, with the Day he design'd to say his first Mass, and desir'd his Majesty to nominate some Person to assist at that Ceremony on his Part; and his Majesty sent Order to that purpose to the President M. Rouille, who repair'd to Lisle. The said Ceremony was perform'd in the following Manner, to the great Edification of all that saw it.

The 1st of January 1707 the Elector of Cologne went early in the Morning to hear Mass in the Chappel of our Lady of Grace, a League without the City of Lisle, and thence return'd incognito to the House in which the Elector of Bavaria was lodg'd, to go with him publickly to the Church of the Jesuites appointed for the Ceremony.

The Procession was made through the principal Streets of the City, and was begun by three Troops of the Jesuites Schollars, the first in the French Habit, the next in the Roman, and the third in the Hungarian Fashion: They were on Horseback, each Troop consisted of 40 Schollars, and was led by its Officers. Then came a Troop of the Elector of Bavaria's Regiment of Carabineers, with their Standards, Trumpets, and Kettledrums. Then 2 Equerries of the two Electors, on Horseback, follow'd by all the Livery Servants belonging to the Stables of the two Courts, marching together in one Company without Distinction. Then two Coaches with 6 Horses each, in which were the Gentlemen Carvers and other Gentlemen Waiters belonging to the two Electors: Two other Coaches with 6 Horses, in which were the Gentlemen of their Bed-Chambers: And two more like Coaches, in which were the Ministers of the two Courts and 4 Canons of the Cathedral Church of Liege, deputed by the Chapter to assist at the Ceremony. They were follow'd by the great Marshal of the Court of Cologne, represented by the Count d'Arco, riding between two Gentlemen performing the Office of Stewards of the Household; these three rode cover'd; the Count d'Arco had a Silver Staff, and the other two had black Staves tipp'd with Ivory: Then came two Harbingers of the two Courts on Foot, follow'd by the Footmen of the two Electors mingled together without Distinction: Then the Trumpets of the two Courts, and the Kettle-Drums of that of Cologne, all on Horseback; follow'd by the Elector of Cologne's Troop of Carabineers, marching on Foot, with their Pertuisans.

Then came the Elector of Cologne's Yeomen of the Guard, preceded by their Drums and Hautboys, and led by their Lieutenant.

Next came on Foot the two Harbingers of the Chamber to the two Electors, follow'd by the Pages of both Courts. Then the Herald of Arms of Beechtergaden, single, and uncover'd; the three Heralds of Arms of Hildesheim, Ratisbon, and Liege, in a Rank, the first in the Middle the second on his Right; the Herald of Arms of the House of Bavaria, single; and then those of the two Electorates, those of Cologne having the Right-Hand, and all were uncover'd. Two Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber on Horseback, bareheaded, represented the two Chamberlains of the two Electors; the first carrying a silver Mace with a Seal, denoting the Office of Arch-Chancellor of Italy which is annex'd to the Electorship of Cologne, and the other a Globe to denote the Office of Arch-bishop annex'd to the Electorship of Bavaria. After them came two Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber bareheaded, carrying on red Velvet Cushions the Electoral Caps of the two Electors. Then the two Marshals of the two Courts, carrying Swords in Scabbards with the Points upwards; the Scabbard of the Elector of Cologne's Sword was of red Velvet, and the Elector of Bavaria's of blue Velvet. Then came the Coach with 6 Horses, in which sat for the Elector of Cologne on the Right-Hand, cloath'd in an Ecclesiastical Habit of Scarlet, as Legate of the holy See; and the Elector of Bavaria on the Left, in his usual Dress: On each side the Coach rode their two Masters of the Horse, and the Officers of their Life-Guards. Then follow'd the Elector of Cologne's Guards on Foot; and a Troop of the Elector of Bavaria's Regiment of Carabineers clos'd the March.
